INTRODUCTION

MR. THOMAS HARDY has placed me under an obligation by his permission to reproduce in facsimile MSS. of two of his poems, and a portrait by Mr. E. O. Hoppé, hitherto unpublished, which appears as frontispiece. Also very kindly he has allowed me to distinguish my compilation by dedicating it to him, though he assumes no responsibility for either its necessity or its accuracy. It would be superfluous were I to attempt any estimate of Mr. Hardy's work. I cannot do better than refer the student to Mr. Lascelles Abercrombie's study: Thomas Hardy, A Critical Study, by Lascelles Abercrombie (Martin Secker, 1912), and to those many essays referred to in the last section of this book.

I have to express my thanks to Mr. Clement Shorter, to whom I am indebted for a generous gift of two of his six privately printed Hardy nugæ, for invaluable assistance in tracing obscure contributions which appeared in periodicals, some of which are now defunct. Mr. Shorter is probably the greatest authority upon Hardy bibliography, and it is a matter for regret with me that, owing to the exigencies of my military service, I have been unable fully to avail myself of his kind offer of unlimited help.

Mr. E. Williams of Hove has given me material assistance by presenting me with two Hardy nugæ printed at Hove.

I must also express thanks to Mr. W. E. Redway of the firm of Frank Hollings, Mr. Thomson of Messrs. Stevens and Brown, Mr. A. Edward Newton, a well-known American collector, the Librarian of the Institute of British Architects, Mr. Robert H. Dodd of New York, Messrs. Harper and Brothers, Messrs. Macmillan and Co., Messrs. Trübner and Co., Messrs. Chapman and Hall, Mr. Sharp of the British Museum Reading Room, and Mr. Thomas J. Wise.

As my publisher desired a book which would appeal primarily to the First Edition collector I have omitted particulars of later editions, nor have I included American editions, which are legion, except where they rank as First Editions, as in the case of The Romantic Adventures of a Milkmaid. At the same time I have kept in view the literary student who will find, I believe, a complete catalogue of the writer's works.

The facsimile reproductions, by Messrs. Vaus and Crampton, Ltd., of two important Hardy MSS., purchased by Mr. Frank Hollings at the Red Cross Sale, are 'Song of the Soldiers,' Mr. Hardy's celebrated war poem, and 'The Night of Trafalgar,' a song in The Dynasts.

The Index has been compiled by Mr. R. Crosley, and is an exhaustive one.

I need scarcely say that I shall be grateful for any material to fill up omissions of which there must be many.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THOMAS HARDY

Parts i., iv., v. only received from America through Trübner & Co. on the 31st March, 28th August, and 14th July 1882, respectively.

Preserved in the British Museum as Registration copies.

A comparison of the above pages with those of the corresponding pages in the Atlantic Monthly, in which 'Two on a Tower' appeared serially, reveals the fact that setting, spacing, and catchwords are identical.

The inference is that the 'parts' were registered for serial copyright purposes in England.

FIRST EDITIONS

8vo, bound in brownish-yellow cloth, lettered in gilt on back, with honeysuckle design in gilt on side.

N.B.—The later edition of this book is dated 1892, and is often mistaken for the First Edition, there being no bibliographical note to the contrary.

EXPLANATORY NOTE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

“The main portion of the following story appeared—with slight modifications—in the Graphic newspaper; other chapters, more especially addressed to adult readers, in the Fortnightly Review and the National Observer, as episodic sketches. My thanks are tendered to the editors and proprietors for enabling me now to piece the trunk and limbs of the novel together, and print it complete, as originally written two years ago. . . . November 1891.

'It was begun as a serial story in Harper's Magazine at the end of November 1894, and was continued in monthly parts.

'But, as in the case of Tess of the D'Urbervilles, the magazine version was for various reasons abridged and modified in some degree, the present edition being the first in which the whole appears as originally written. And in the difficulty of coming to an early decision in the matter of a title, the tale was issued under a provisional name—two such titles having, in fact, been successively adopted. The present and final title, deemed on the whole the best, was one of the earliest thought of.'

Although one would expect to find thirty illustrations as stated on the Title-page, it should be noted that there are, including the Frontispiece, thirty-one.

8vo, bound in dark green ribbed cloth, lettered in gilt on back, with circular gilt design on side, T.E.G., uncut.

Also issued in presentation form, bound in cream-coloured buckram with similar lettering and design, but all edges gilt ; collations similar, but cloth copy about quarter-of-an-inch taller than that in buckram.

PREFACE

“Of the miscellaneous collection of verse that follows, only four pieces have been published, though many were written long ago, and others partly written. In some few cases the verses were turned into prose and printed as such, it having been unanticipated at that time that they might see the light.” . . .

Song: The Night of Trafalgar.

I.

In the wild October night-time when the wind raved round the land,
And the Back-sea met the Front-sea, and our doors were blocked with sand,
And we heard the drub of Deadman's Bay, where bones of thousands are,
We knew not what the Day had done for us at Trafalgar.

Had done,

Had done

For us at Trafalgar.

II.

"Pull hard and make the Nothe, or down we go!" one says, says he:
We pulled, and bedtime brought the storm; but snug at home slept we.
Yet all the while our gallants after fighting through the day
Were beating up and down the dark, son'-west of Cadiz Bay.

The dark,

The dark,

Son'-west of Cadiz Bay.

III.

The victors and the vanquished then the storm it tossed and tore,
As hard they strove, those worn-out men, upon that surly shore;
Dead Nelson and his half-dead crew, his foes from near and far
Were rolled together on the deep that night at Trafalgar!

The deep

The deep

That night at Trafalgar.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THOMAS HARDY

THOMAS HARDY'S PRIZE ESSAY

Those who are familiar with the biographical notice of Mr. Thomas Hardy in the Encyclopædia Britannica are aware that he secured the Prize of the Institute of British Architects for his essay 'The application of coloured bricks and terra-cotta to modern architecture,' submitted under the motto: 'Tentavi quid in eo genere possem.' The following note, which is the text of the judge's criticism, is likely to interest Hardy students:—

'The author of this essay has scarcely gone sufficiently into the subject proposed, and that portion referring to moulded and shaped bricks has scarcely been noticed. The essay, as far as it is written, is a very fair one, and deserves the medal, but, for the above reason, we cannot recommend that the supplementary sum of £10 be given with it.'

THOMAS HARDY'S FIRST BOOK

In the Atlantic Monthly, March 1915, Mr. A. Edward Newton's article 'Amenities of Book Collecting' throws light upon Hardy's first book. The collector tells how he bought of Hutt, for five shillings, an autograph letter of Thomas Hardy to his first publisher, Tinsley, from Brockhampton, Dorchester, December 20, 1870, concerning terms for the publication of Desperate Remedies. The letter is in Mr. Newton's collection, and is printed in the article referred to above.

'DESTINY AND A BLUE CLOAK'

In a letter, dated September 12, 1874, from 4 Celbridge Place, Westbourne Park, to the editor of the New York Times, Mr. Hardy mentions that he is forwarding the MS. of a short story with the above-named title 'at the request of Mr. J. H. Fyfe, Savile Club, on terms probably known to yourself.'

"Men who march away."

Song of the Soldiers.

What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away,
Ere the barn-cocks say
Night is growing gray,
To hazards whence no tears can win us;
What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away?

Is it a purlind pranks, O think you,
Friend with the nursing eye
Who watch us stepping by
With doubt and dolorous sigh?
Can much pondering so hoodwink you!
Is it a purlind pranks, O think you,
Friend with the nursing eye?

Nay. We see well what we are doing,
Though some may not see —
Dalliers as they be —
England's need are we:
Her distress would ^{leave} ~~set~~ us reeling:
Nay. We see well what we are doing,
Though some may not see!

In our heart of hearts believing
 Victory crowns the just,
 And that braggart's must
 Surely bite the dust,
^{Press}~~March~~ we to the field ungrieving.
 In our heart of hearts believing
 Victory crowns the just.

Hence the faith and fire within us
 Men who march away
 Ere the barn-cocks say
 Night is growing gray.
 To hazards whence no tears can win us;
 Hence the faith and fire within us
 Men who march away.

LETTER, dated November 17, 1890, in the Athenæum of November 22, 1890, on the treatment of 'a certain author' (Rudyard Kipling), by Messrs. Harper & Brothers. Signed WALTER BESANT.

WILLIAM BLACK.

THOMAS HARDY.

This letter, which was a defence of Harper & Brothers, drew from Mr. Kipling 'The Rhyme of The Three Captains,' which appeared in the Athenæum, December 6, 1890. The line :

"And one was Lord of the Wessex coast and all the lands thereby"

refers to Mr. Hardy. The fifth line from the end contains a play upon his name 'the bezant is hard, ay and black.' [The italics are mine.]

THE WESSEX NOVELS

THE WESSEX NOVELS

THE first volume of the Wessex Novels edition made its appearance in 1895, published by Osgood, M'Ilvaine and Co.; in 1897 the imprint changed to that of Harper and Brothers. In 1902 Macmillan and Co., Ltd., took over the publication of Mr. Hardy's works.

The edition includes five separate First Editions:—

Vol. VIII. 'Jude the Obscure,' 1896.

Vol. XVII. 'The Well Beloved,' 1897.

(Not numbered) 'Wessex Poems,' 1898.

(Not numbered) 'Poems of the Past and the Present,' 1902.

Vol. XVIII. 'A Changed Man,' 1913.

The twenty volumes are uniformly bound in dark green ribbed cloth, lettered in gilt on back, with circular gilt design on side, top edges gilt, others uncut.

'Wessex Poems,' 1898, and 'Poems of the Past and the Present,' 1902, were issued also in white buckram with similar gilt lettering and design, and gilt edges. The collations are similar to those of the dark green cloth issue, except that the latter is taller by about quarter-of-an-inch. The white buckram issue is less well known than that in cloth; it was evidently intended for presentation. These two volumes, although they are not novels, are given in the 'Wessex Novels' edition, owing to the fact that they are uniform with the novels.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THOMAS HARDY

N.B.—The publishers' names on the backs of volumes should correspond with the imprints inside. When, in 1897, Harper and Brothers took over the publication of the Wessex Novels they also acquired the stock of those volumes which were not out of print, and these, although bearing Osgood and M'Ilvaine's imprint, were bound up in Harper and Brothers' cloth. This important point is particularly to be observed in 'Two on a Tower,' 'The Mayor of Casterbridge,' and 'The Return of the Native.'

'The present edition of the volume contains nearly a chapter which has never yet appeared in any English copy, though it was printed in the serial issue of the tale, and in the American edition. The restoration was made at the instance of some good judges across the Atlantic, who strongly represented that the home edition suffered from the omission. Some shorter passages and names, omitted or altered for reasons which no longer exist, in the original printing of both English and American editions, have also been replaced or inserted for the first time.'

‘ It was begun as a serial story in Harper's Magazine at the end of November 1894, and was continued in monthly parts.

‘ But, as in the case of Tess of the D'Urbervilles, the magazine version was for various reasons abridged and modified in some degree, the present edition being the first in which the whole appears as originally written. And in the difficulty of coming to an early decision in the matter of a title, the tale was issued under a provisional name—two such titles having, in fact, been successively adopted. The present and final title, deemed on the whole the best, was one of the earliest thought of.’

PREFACE

‘Of the miscellaneous collection of verse that follows, only four pieces have been published, though many were written long ago, and others partly written. In some few cases the verses were turned into prose and printed as such, it having been unanticipated at that time that they might see the light.’ . . .

APPENDIX

MEN WHO MARCH AWAY : SONG OF THE SOLDIERS. From the Red Cross Sale (presented by Mr. Thomas Hardy). Autograph Copy signed in full, $1\frac{1}{2}$ pp., 4to, five stanzas of 7 lines each, double title, full signature and date, all in MS. Written September 5, first published in the Times, September 9, and reprinted in various newspapers throughout England and America, first published in 4-page leaflet form at Hove, September 16, 1914, and later privately printed by Mr. Clement Shorter in booklet form. Included in 'Satires of Circumstance,' pp. 229-230. The MS. differs from the book in these details: the book has a first line heading of 'Postscript,' which is absent from the MS. In Stanza III. of the MS., lines 1 and 6 have transposing brackets. Line 5, Stanza IV., in the MS. 'March' is changed for 'Press.' Other differences are those of punctuation.

THE NIGHT OF TRAFALGAR. From the Red Cross Sale (presented by Mr. Thomas Hardy). Autograph copy, signed in full, 1 p., 4to, three stanzas of 7 lines each, heading and signature, all in MS. First published in 'The Dynasts, a Drama of the Napoleonic Wars,' Volume 1, pp. 179-180, Act v., Scene VII., and sung by Mr. Rutland Barrington in the stage representa-
